Aims and scope

The International Review of Applied Financial Issues and Economics a quarterly review welcomes original contributions on applied issues in finance and economics. The primary criteria for selecting papers are high quality and importance for the field. Works that make a concrete contribution to empirical finance and economics or applied theory are especially encouraged for publication consideration. Also, the review welcomes contributions that deal with international issues or issues related to specific countries.

The International Review of Applied Financial Issues and Economics is a source for sophisticated analysis, especially theoretical papers that yield novel testable implications, and empirical papers that are theoretically well motivated.

Papers submitted on the International Review of Applied Financial Issues and Economics have rigorous double-blind peer review, based on initial Editors screening and anonymized refereeing by two anonymous referees.

The review is published quarterly, in March, June, September and December and covers a wide variety of topics including:

- Finance
- International Finance
- Macroeconomic Aspects of Finance
- General Financial Markets
- Financial Institutions
- Behavioral Finance
- Asset Pricing
- Financial Management
- Options and Futures
- Market Microstructure
- Taxation, Subsidies and Revenue
- Corporate Finance and Governance
- Money and Banking
- Markets and Institutions of Emerging Markets
- Financial Economics
- Applied Financial Econometrics
- Financial Risk Analysis
- Risk Management
- Risk Hedging Techniques
- Portfolio Management

The International Review of Applied Financial Issues and Economics provides a valuable research and reference source for scholars and practitioners in the finance and economics field.
